Our Principles

1. Provide opportunities, support and resources for social and political action and change at individual, group and social levels.
2. Be run as a collective, with the centre of power owned and retained by women consulted about policies and activities.
3. Be committed to community awareness and research of National Women's Health Program needs, recognising all factors that affect health and wellbeing.
4. Ensure consumers' rights to independent expression, decision and action are recognised and that they are given respect, dignity and consideration.
5. Seek to empower people by validating past, present and future perceptions and choices, affirming each person's unique story, wisdom, knowledge and experiences.
6. Encourage mutual support and care for women by women: fostering the celebration of their lives and affirming their dreaming.
7. Be committed to providing quality services and processes accessible to women of all ages in Central Queensland. .
8. Be committed to providing services and resources that are socially and culturally appropriate.
9. Support affirmative action and seek to give extra emphasis and resources to women disadvantaged in the present system to redress the imbalance.
